PFLAG Program
Spotlight on LGBT Youth Activism
Tuesday, March 8th, 7pm - Program in Mead Hall, FUMC

Throughout history, youth have been at the forefront leading social justice struggles. Join us as we offer support by listening to our young people.

Dan Mestas, PFLAG Board Youth member, will gather a panel of area young people to talk about what their GSA's are planning for the National Day of Silence in April and their experiences at the Queer Youth Summit. This state-wide event planned by and for LGBT youth was held on Saturday, February 26th in Denver at Mi Casa. Dan Mestas was one of the youth leaders who organized this state-wide event which seeks to provide tools for affecting social change. The organizational sponsors were Boulder County OASOS, Inside Out in Colorado Springs, YHAC, Youth Alley, Lambda in Fort Collins and the University of Denver. The PFLAG Board made a donation of $250 to support these efforts.

Always Our Kids: A Path to Family Acceptance

Presented by Dr. Caitlin Ryan

How families and communities can respond and adapt when gay youth come out .

Parents, educators, all who work with families are invited to hear Caitlin Ryan, Director of the Family Acceptance Project, San Francisco State University, the only community research, intervention, education and policy initiative that works to promote family acceptance and to decrease major health and related risks for LGBT youth in the context of their families.

Dr. Ryan will be presenting several times in Denver and Boulder County during her visit to Colorado:

Sat. April 2 - 10:30am to noon

Lafayette Public Library, 775 W. Baseline

1:00 to 4:30pm

Jared Polis Auditorium
Johnson and Wales University, Denver

Sun. April 3 - 2:00 - 4:30pm

First United Methodist Church, Boulder

Mon. April 4- 6:00 - 8:30pm

Skyline High School, Longmont
600 E. Mountain Ave.
Food and child care provided

Ryan's research has identified specific behaviors that families and caregivers use to express acceptance and rejection of their LGBT children's identity and how these behaviors link with depression, substance abuse, suicidal thoughts and attempts, and sexual health risks, as well as health and well-being in their LGBT children in young adulthood. Dr. Ryan's research gives guidance on how families can decrease specific rejecting behaviors and, instead, engage in supportive behaviors even when their traditional culture and religion might pull them toward rejection.

Groundbreaking Study Reveals Discrimination

The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force and the National Center for Transgender Equality (NCTE) recently released a comprehensive new report, "Injustice at Every Turn," revealing the depth of discrimination against transgender and gender non-conforming people in a wide range of areas, including education, health care, employment, and housing. The study, based on the results from the National Transgender Discrimination Survey (NTDS), was based on responses from over 6,450 participants. The NTDS is the first large-scale national study of discrimination against transgender and gender non-conforming Americans, and paints a more complete picture than any prior research to date.

Among the key findings from "Injustice at Every Turn":

- Respondents were nearly four times more likely to live in extreme poverty, with household income of less than $10,000.
- Respondents were twice as likely to be unemployed compared to the population as a whole. Half of those surveyed reported experiencing harassment or other mistreatment in the workplace, and one in four were fired because of their gender identity or expression.
- While discrimination was pervasive for the entire sample, it was particularly pronounced for people of color. African-American transgender respondents fared far worse than all others in many areas studied.
- Housing discrimination was also common. 19% reported being refused a home or apartment and 11% reported being evicted because of their gender identity or expression. One in five respondents experienced homelessness because of their gender identity or expression.
- An astonishing 41% of respondents reported attempting suicide, compared to only 1.6% of the general population..
- Discrimination in health care and poor health outcomes were frequently experienced by respondents. 19% reported being refused care due to bias against transgender or gender-nonconforming people, with this figure even higher for respondents of color. Respondents also had over four times the national average of HIV infection.
- Harassment by law enforcement was reported by 22% of respondents and nearly half were uncomfortable seeking police assistance.

Despite the hardships they often face, transgender and gender non-conforming persons persevere. Over 78% reported feeling more comfortable at work and their performance improving after transitioning, despite the same levels of harassment in the workplace.

New Book Idea: The Woman I Was Not Born to Be

By Aleshia Brevard - Temple University Press, Philadelphia PA

For those of us who became acquainted with the transgender experience only recently, this wonderful book is an eye-opener. In the 1950s and 1960s, most of us had never heard of a transsexual. Then there was Christine Jorgenson and the lurid press around her gender-related surgery.

“The Woman I was Not Born to Be” is Aleshia Brevard’s memoir as she travelled from a rural Tennessee “sissy boy” through her female impersonator days to her career as a highly regarded stage, screen, and TV actress and beyond. Honestly written with self-deprecation as well as appreciation and humor, this book shines a bright light on the early years of transsexual surgery and its aftermath.

Have any of my readers realized that a 1950s solution to excessively feminine boys was super-doses of testosterone? Did you know that in the early 1960s a male-bodied individual had to be castrated prior to SRS – else the testicles would be placed inside the body? Do you recall that policy, if not law, required female impersonators/cross dressers to wear at least three articles of gender-appropriate clothing or face imprisonment? No wonder so many transsexuals hid their reality and went stealth in their lives!

“The Woman I was Not Born to Be” shows how Aleshia’s low self-esteem in her youth was reinforced by her father and almost every male father or husband figure for many years, leaving her self-consciously striving to reflect the subservient female role required by the mid-1900s society. While quite successful in her theatrical life, her interpersonal relationships with many males – from boy-friends, neighbors, and husbands to various Hollywood agents and actors - also reinforced her lack of self-confidence as a woman. It was largely with the support of her mother, Mozelle, and her close friend Stormy Lee (a fellow transsexual/drag queen) that she eventually realized that she did not need to define herself as a woman based on the misogynistic social customs of the mid-twentieth century. Highly recommended!

Ugandan LGBT Advocate Murdered

David Kato knew he was a marked man. As the most outspoken LGBT rights advocate in Uganda, a country where homophobia and transphobia is so severe that Parliament is considering a bill to execute LGBT people, Mr. Kato had received a stream of death threats, his friends said. A few months ago, a Ugandan newspaper ran an anti-LGBT diatribe with Mr. Kato's picture on the front page under a banner urging, "Hang Them." On Wednesday afternoon, Mr. Kato was beaten to death with a hammer. Police officials were quick to chalk up the motive to robbery, but members of the small and increasingly besieged LGBT community in Uganda suspect otherwise. President Obama issued a statement decrying the act, stating Kato "was a powerful advocate for fairness and freedom. The United States mourns his murder, and we recommit ourselves to David's work." (From Policy Matters, National PFLAG)

Thanks Mr. President! Administration Refuses to Defend DOMA

The Department of Justice has issued a letter saying it will no longer defend the constitutionality of a federal law (DOMA) that bans recognition of same-sex marriage. In July of 2010, a federal district court ruled that Section 3 of DOMA, the section that defines marriage as one man and one woman, as unconstitutional. The letter issued today means that the administration will not appeal that case. If the courts rule DOMA unconstitutional, married same-sex couples may be eligible for the federal benefits given to married couples.

Longtime LGBT Advocate Wins Appointment

President Barack Obama has named former National Center for Lesbian Rights (NCLR) Executive Director Roberta Achtenberg to a seat on the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. The White House announced the appointment of the San Francisco resident, a California State University trustee, to the commission on January 26th. Achtenberg co-founded NCLR and was elected to the San Francisco Board of Supervisors in 1990. In 1993, she became the first openly LGBT person to be confirmed for a federal appointment when the Senate approved President Bill Clinton's nomination of Achtenberg as assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The 5th Annual TRANSforming Gender Symposium At CU Boulder - FREE - Friday, April 1st and Saturday April 2nd

This year's Symposium will offer an array of talks, trainings, and film screenings to increase visibility and education about transgender identities and experiences, and to bring together the local transgender and ally community. The conference is open to the public and completely free to attend. Speakers this year include Dean Spade, Dr. Marci Bowers, Dr. Nick Gorton, Rabbi Reuben Zellman, and Ignacio Rivera. This will be their first multi-track program, including workshops specifically for providers as well as a film track, which begins on Saturday with the popular new film "Faces & Facets," produced by PFLAG Boulder County.

Did You Know?

Research published in the journal Pediatrics found significantly higher rates of mental and physical health problems among LGBT young adults who experienced high levels of rejection from their parents while they were adolescents. Compared with LGBT young adults who experienced very little or no parental rejection, LGBT young adults who experienced high levels of rejection were:

- Nearly 6 times as likely to have high levels of depression
- More than 8 times as likely to have attempted suicide
- More than 3 times as likely to use illegal drugs, and
- More than 3 times as likely to engage in unprotected sexual behaviors that put them at increased risk for HIV and other sexually transmitted infections.
