The Low Flying Knobs

An all women's Afro-pop marimba ensemble, the "Knobs" play traditional and contemporary music from Zimbabwe, South Africa and other areas of the African diaspora. Their music is upbeat, engaging, danceable and will make you rock!

Formed in 1994, The Low Flying Knobs have performed throughout Colorado at festivals, concert series, art galleries, private parties, schools, libraries, weddings, benefits and corporate events. As a women's band, the Knobs are committed to supporting women and girls in Zimbabwe.

Want to learn to play? Classes are offered for beginners and intermediates, for children and adults. To sign up or book them to perform, go to their website:

Dessert in the Parlor
(Please do not bring food or drink into the sanctuary)

Special thanks to the many people who helped make this possible:

All the talented performers who gave their time and talent to create this enjoyable entertainment;

Melissa Druckman and the contributions of many helpers who baked, set-up and served the delicious desserts;

The Walnut Café and Dana D, whom we always count on for edible support;

King Soopers and Sprout Farmer's Market stores in Boulder;

The PFLAG members who helped with ushering, donation gathering, program layout and all the back-stage tasks that supported this event;

Evanne Brown, Dick Hayward, Mike Crowe, Wes Goodson of First United Methodist Church who all provided technical help.

About the Artists

(Their CD's will be on sale in the parlor after the concert.)

Kristi Bartleson

With origins in the high Colorado Rockies, Kristi graduated with honors from the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, New York. Her professional résumé as a harpist includes some unusual credits for a singer/songwriter: she has played at New York's Carnegie Hall with the Select Eastman Orchestra and as a member of the Colorado Symphony Orchestra, she has accompanied such unlikely acts as The Who, Crosby, Stills and Nash and The Moody Blues. Kristi has recently relocated to Nederland, Colorado, and is currently working on new projects as a singer and songwriter.

Gregg Tobo has been performing magic under the auspices of his company, "Astonishing Productions," for the last three years. He received his B.A. in Theatre from the University of Colorado, Boulder. He now lives in Lafayette with his wife, his step-daughter, his dog, and his brother-in-law.

Resonance Women's Chorus of Boulder

Resonance Women's Chorus of Boulder is a 125-voice chorus singing contemporary women's choral music. We are a community of women who share an artistic vision, a human connection, and a desire to express both through song. Our sound and presence are energized by our joy in singing and by our commitment to the shared project and to each other. With an emphasis on songs of social awareness, Resonance aspires to be a collective voice of women's strength, wisdom, and beauty. Founded in 2002, Resonance is led by artistic director Sue Coffee.
